Lisa
_a war nurse_

Brimrún (Brúna)
a bus driver; Lisa’s daughter

Mikael
Lisa’s ex-stepson

Höskuldur
Brúna’s son

Kristín
Mikael’s “girlfriend”

Lisa’s apartment on Vallhólmi in the Kópavogur neighborhood is reminiscent of a battlefield, with cardboard boxes and all kinds of debris scattered about, as though the inhabitant hardly settled in. A red axe can be seen hanging on a wall. The bathroom wall has been removed; a bathtub faces the audience. Drywall has been nailed across the doors to the other rooms of the apartment. A sliding glass door opens to a sundeck in the garden. Steps descend from the living room to the basement.
Lísa is sockless and wearing high-heeled, transparent, plastic boots. Piles of human hair (occasionally braided) are scattered about the room. Lísa strokes the hair and combs it, then systematically places it into a clear plastic bag. There’s a knock at the door. Lísa stuffs the hair into a suitcase she tries to hide. More knocking. Lísa opens it cautiously; Brúna rushes in and slams it behind her. She’s wearing her bus driver’s uniform and brown, open Ecco-brand sandals. She’s dark-haired and has on pearl earrings. Lísa startles when she sees her daughter but doesn’t do anything.

Lisa Why aren’t you wearing the shoes I gave you?
Brúna They’re too small. Why is your voice so hoarse?
Lisa Because no one talks to me. Do you know how much they cost?
Brúna It doesn’t matter, they’re too small.
Lisa 64,000 króna
Brúna They’re still too small.
Lisa I doubt such shoes are beautiful in very large numbers. Won’t your feet keep growing and growing without shoes to hold them in?
Brúna My feet haven’t gotten any bigger since puberty. But you were long gone before that happened.

Silence.

Lisa Are you at work right now? Or do you put on a fleece sweater without getting paid for it?
Brúna I’m on second shift.
Lisa Those shoes…
Brúna Mom, what are you going on about?
Lisa No, it’s just… Your shoes…
Brúna I didn’t come to Kópavogur for fashion tips.
Lisa You’re the only one who doesn’t want my advice. Did you see the advice I gave out in the Nursing Journal? “Karate for Neglected Children”? Thousands shared it on Facebook. Five thousand likes.
Brúna Ok. What’s up with my shoes?
Lisa It’s just they look comfortable.

Brúna  I drive seven hours a day, believe me, you need to air your feet, my feet are my tools.
Lisa  Have you seen the feet on the pigeons in big cities like Paris?
Brúna  I’ve never been to Paris.
Lisa  I don’t know if that would be right for you.

A knock. Höskuldur is standing at the glass door:

Brúna  Damn.
Lisa  Is my little Hoskuldur with you? Let him in. He’ll freeze out there.
Brúna  I'd rather he freezes out there than in here.
Lisa  They’re crooked, lopsided, crying, exhausted, and none of them have claws.
Brúna  What are you talking about?
Lisa  The feet on the pigeons! Often they rot or wither because the pigeons land on the power lines or on those little needles on the windowsills, you have to watch out...
Brúna  What are you on about?
Lisa  Pigeons. People put spears on windowsills so when the pigeons are tired and plop themselves down, they impale themselves. Except if they put their feet down first, the spears go through their claws and deform them.
Brúna  I have a friend online.
Lisa  From Paris?
Brúna  No, Sauðárkrókur, up north, and he said that, you know, you never see baby pigeons. Simply never. You only see adult pigeons. And you never see pigeons sitting on eggs, either. And he said, it’s not something I necessarily agree with, I don’t mean anything by it, it’s just he said pigeons come straight from hell. (Höskuldur knocks on the door again) Höskuldur is dressed for cold, it’d take him until tomorrow to freeze to death.
Lisa  The claws tear off and the skin frays on the bones so that bits blow off so they’re walking around on their stumps, crippled, around all the fine French slim women. In Kosovo, on the other hand-
Brúna  Can we have just one Kosovo-free moment?

Lisa In Kosovo, the doves ran about so neat and clean with their orange talons. While the soldiers limped and used lamps as prosthetic legs.

_Höskuldur knocks on the door again and Lisa goes to open it._

Brúna No Mom, I need to talk to you about something first!

_Lisa opens the door for Höskuldur. He punches his mom in the neck._

Brúna Höskuldur, are you kidding me, stop it!

Höskuldur Give me your phone, mine’s dead.

Lisa Hello, cutiepie, remember your grandmother?

Brúna Don’t do that, we were here just last weekend. Look, sit over there.

_Brúna throws her phone to Höskuldur. Lisa combs through his hair._

Lisa Does he also think the phone is his mother? I don’t mean it. I’m to blame, of course, obviously you can’t bring up a child, you never had the chance to be a child yourself. Well, I'm... Brúna, is everything okay, my love?

Brúna I need to take the four to the mall.

Lisa What do you mean? Is that some bus-lingo?

Brúna I need to go see a specialist.

Lisa But nothing came up at the last visit? You went there... the cancer check... it wasn’t anything, was it?

Brúna I think this is... it’s something to do with the skin. It’s like it leaks from time to time, or oozes. Then it stings. Look under my nose, see how it’s so red?

Lisa Why don’t you take a sick day, relax some?

Brúna Don’t tell me what to do.

Lisa I'm just trying to be your friend.

Brúna You’re my mom, not my friend.

Lisa I was also that. I worked and worked. And when a 160-kilo man fell out of his bed I just grabbed him without thinking. My body ruined by a life of sacrifice.

Brúna I was thinking of cutting my hands off, here, at the wrist, so I can’t drive the fucking bus.

5. _the potato eaters_

Lisa      That’s a bit extreme.
Brúna    Do you see the redness on my nose, yes or no?
Lisa        No.
Brúna  Right, you just can’t be bothered to look, I’m as red as fire here.
Lisa       Isn’t it just the cold?
Brúna  It’s not that cold outside!
Lisa        I don’t think you need to go to a dermatologist...
Brúna      You’re not a dermatologist.
Lisa        But I know all of them, and they know me.
Brúna  I’ve been on the waiting list for six months.
Lisa       You know, I saw this woman the other day doing stand up. Should I do it? So many men these days are hot for funny grannies, they think we have no limits sexually.
Brúna  Don’t talk like that!
Lisa       Brúna, my love, you can’t come here, lock the child outside, and get mad at me.
Brúna      Can he stay with you?
Lisa         Wha-?
Brúna    Do you want to look after him?
Lisa        Me look after him? For you?
Brúna      Just this once. No more than that. I just don’t want him to be alone.

* A short silence *

Lisa        You know, it’s absolutely ridiculous that I’ve never been asked to look after the boy before now. I could perform CPR on him if something happened, I still have my notes from nursing school, or help him psychologically or ...
Brúna  Just toast, marmalade, Disney movies, reading time. Be a grandmother.
Lisa        But what about your wife?
Brúna      We won’t tell Magga about it.
Lisa Come now, your wife doesn’t know you're going to the best doctor at the mall. You’re hiding it. That lesbian ogress. You know, Brúna, I have my doubts about the relationship the two of you are...

Brúna (interrupts) You jabber on like some old dude in the hot tub...

Lisa (interrupts) No, fair enough. But I want more: it’s not fair that I'm plan C. You're punishing me because I saved people’s lives back then, first in Bosnia and then in Kosovo and then of course...

Brúna (interrupts) No, mom, I haven’t been punishing you for saving lives!

Lisa What if I’m busy?

Brúna What?

Lisa I have that app on my phone and, yeah, somebody might want to swipe right and swing by for some afternoon delight, some guy might...

Brúna Ugh, don’t say anything more. Hössi can just play in the basement for a bit. (Calling her son) Hössi! Give it!

Höskuldur lifts his hand and drops Brúna’s phone on the floor. She picks up the phone and leaves. Lisa taps away at her phone and Höskuldur stares at her.

Höskuldur You know how to knit?

Lisa Do you think I got the Order of the Falcon simply for knitting?

Höskuldur I know how to.

Lisa Well, good for you.

Höskuldur Why do you have so many shelves with nothing on them?

Lisa I’m not like your mom with all my closets and drawers stuffed with candy. That was your great-grandma. Piled food around her like bricks in a wall.

Höskuldur I don’t eat candy.

Lisa I don’t either.

Höskuldur I know.

Lisa We're too smart to think that a bit of pic-n-mix would do us any good.

Höskuldur Grandmother.

Lisa: Also, you can never drink wine.
Höskuldur: Can I tell you something?
Lisa: What?
Höskuldur: Mom says you make her ill.
Lisa: Why do you talk to me like that?
Höskuldur: (pulls out some patterned cotton underwear) Is this your underwear?
Lisa: So what?
Höskuldur: It’s nice.
Lisa: You think so?
Höskuldur: Yeah.
Lisa: Would you like to visit me more often?
Höskuldur: We visit grandmother the first Saturday of the month at 3pm for one hour.

Höskuldur drops the underwear on the floor and picks up a hair braid.

Lisa: Give me that! What’s with you?
Lisa: (picks the underwear up off the floor) These are new, you can wear them.
Höskuldur: What am I meant to do with them?
Lisa: Whatever you want, you're visiting grandmother, that's all.
Hoskuldur: But I can’t eat candy.
Lisa: Right.
Hoskuldur: Or knit.
Lisa: No
Hoskuldur: Or drink.
Lisa: And you can be called whatever you want. Your great-grandfather hated the name Höskuldur.
Höskuldur: Can I change it?
Lisa: You can be called Pablo and be from China.

8. the potato eaters
Höskuldur Or I could just be Lisa.
Lisa Like me?
Höskuldur Yes.
Lisa Lisa, my dear, as you like.
Höskuldur And we'll be mom’s friend.

_Höskuldur put the underwear on over the jeans._

Lisa The color suits you. Lisa my love, how about I fetch us a snack?

_There is a knock at the door._

Lisa (calling) Clearly the four travels fast.

_Lisa runs her fingers through Höskuldur’s hair just before the door opens._

Mikael is standing in the doorway. He is very attractive, in a boyish way, though he’s no longer a boy. He resembles a prince from a fairytale except he’s too pale and too much of a smoker to convincingly pull it off. Perhaps he’s still living his glory days from the past, when he was cooler. When Mikael takes off his sweater, his shirt rides up above his nipples.

Mikael Are you working?
Lisa Hi.
Mikael Hi. Why are you off work?
Lisa I hardly work at all. What are you ...?
Mikael Why?
Lisa, I have few needs.
Mikael I was sure you weren’t going to be home. I was going to have to sit here on the steps like I was locked outside. Is that a new perfume?
Lisa I changed in Kosovo.
Mikael I’ve seen you since you came back.
Lisa I know. You just haven’t said hi.
Mikael (looks at Höskuldur) Wait, who is this freak?
Lisa Why would you address him that way?

9. the potato eaters

Mikael: Greetings.

Höskuldur: Hi.

Mikael: Brúna’s sprog?

Lisa: Mikael, I can’t talk to you right now. It’s not a good time...

Mikael: Can I sit down?

Hoskuldur: Do you have a car?

Mikael: No. I came on horseback. I’m a prince.

Hoskuldur: What do you mean, a prince?

Lisa: A former prince.

Mikael: Yes, maybe a recovering prince. I’m your ex-cousin. My dad married your grandmother during a bender.

Höskuldur: Where is he?

Mikael: Right now? He’s probably waking up in a wet bed somewhere in Pattaya, Thailand. Yes. And taking off his mask. He has sleep apnea and so he travels with a small bag and a snout which he connects to his face via this mask. And that’s how he avoids choking in his sleep. One day at a time.

Höskuldur: Do you live there too?

Mikael: No. I live on the tenth floor of a palace. Do you know what it’s called?

Höskuldur: Bowling Palace?

Mikael: No.

Höskuldur: Furniture Palace?

Mikael: No.

Höskuldur: Video Palace?

Mikael: No. Engihjallí.

Lisa: I'm babysitting, Mikael, come back when I'm not babysitting.

Mikael: (to Höskuldur) You see how gravity has been kind to your grandmother. Even though she went to war. Now, my boy, step out of those.

Höskuldur takes off the underwear.

Lisa  What do you want to talk to me about?
Mikael  I don’t want to talk to you about anything. I want you to talk to a particular woman about me. About my situation.
Mikael  I want you to talk to this woman for me.
Lisa  What woman?
Mikael  Kristín.
Lisa  Who is she?
Mikael  I’d totally planned out Christmas.
Lisa  Now wait, Mikael.
Mikael  With Kristín—Stína—at a hotel in Chiang Mai in Thailand, hundreds and hundreds of miles from Pattaya, half board, you get breakfast, but you can choose, you know, dinner or lunch. I'm not kidding, you absolutely get to decide for yourself. And then perhaps we party a bit, you know, do some uppers, something to wake us up, just to refresh us, and the thing is that Thailanders have such sweet amphetamines, totally the finest. So we’d wake up, you understand, half past ten in the morning and oh shit, only half an hour left for breakfast and we’d take the rest of pills just to get us out of the room. Then we’d go downstairs to the buffet, but then began to laugh obscenely. Of course, we’d have no appetite. Because of the uppers. So we’d just drink the coffee and go back up to fuck. But then you ...
Lisa  How do I fit into this Thai fantasy of yours, am I working at the breakfast buffet?
Mikael  Your generation.
Lisa  Huh?
Mikael  You raised a generation of little frumpy cunts: "Be independent. Take space."
Lisa  We just taught them to see through you.
Mikael  (to Höskuldur) Listen, freak, I reckon there must be some old car or other here, look (lifts the cushion off the couch and pulls up an old electric car with a cable), go play with this. You’re horribly girlish, poor wretch, your grandma is to blame, you know, she’s got some magic eye she casts over people.

Lisa  Stop it.
Höskuldur  My name is Lisa too.
Mikael  Hahaha, well, you just keep fucking up the youth, Lisa. You want to have grandmother all to yourself, is that it?
Höskuldur  Can’t you go away and visit that man with the snout?
Mikael  No, I don’t see him very often.
Höskuldur  Why not?
Mikael  I stole his girlfriend one time. Do you have a girlfriend?
Höskuldur  Yes, I broke her tooth.
Mikael  You'd be a hit in Pattaya.
Höskuldur  Yes, sure. Do you have a brother?
Mikael  No.
Höskuldur  Okay. How much did the snout cost?
Mikael  Years of drinking.
Höskuldur  Yes, sure.
Lisa  Höskuldur, dear, go down to the basement to play.
Höskuldur  Shouldn’t I stay and help you?
Mikael  Jesus Christ.
Lisa  Just hurry on down.

Höskuldur hands Lisa her underwear and she puts them in her pocket. Höskuldur goes.
Mikael  By the time she woke up, I was giving her an orgasm. I was lying there in a good mood, I had a good buzz on. And I didn’t want to wake her up, so I came first, and then she woke up when she came and got mad, really mad.
Lisa  And?
Mikael  And she wants to throw me in prison for that, for satisfying her.
Lisa  What are you taking about?
Mikael  She’s planning to formally charge me, she’s from a family of lawyers. They call me the dropout.

12.

Lisa Mikael, this is very serious.

Mikael She certainly thinks so...

Lisa Is this the first time something like this has come up?

Mikael Sure.

Lisa Answer me, Mikael.

Mikael Yes, this is absolutely the first time someone has accused me... of rape.

Lisa I’m sorry, why are you telling me this?

Mikael I need to use your phone, she won’t answer mine. Are you going to help me?

Lisa What can I do?

Mikael Talk to her. Make her stop.

Lisa Right. You know I ran for parliament for the Women's Liberation movement, I'm not going to... why would she listen to me anyway?

Mikael You don’t want to help me? I knew it.

Lisa I think it’s for the best.

Mikael There’s just one thing. I have a fantastic lawyer. Dad came through for me, the old boy, he totally gets it.

Lisa Well, that's good.

Mikael Not for you.

Lisa Mikael.

Mikael Well. My lawyer asked: Is there some explanation in your history for your lack of boundaries when it comes to sex? If there’s an explanation, something in your history, then this matter’s over, we just need that explanation...

Lisa And what did you say?

Mikael Nothing, yet. But, of course, I do have an explanation: my stepmother raped me when I was fifteen...

Lisa (laughs, her laughter increasing, becoming shrill) What did you say?

Mikael I started fucking my stepmother when I was fifteen years old.

Lisa (sitting) You’re full of crap, child.

---

Mikael: And that family of lawyers is surely going to try the case in the media. And the judge will have to find me guilty. You'll be pulled through the shit: “National honoree had sex with child.” Brúna will be done with you. You want to be a martyr and a moral leader. But you don’t know what it’s like to be alone. And I mean alone. Someone who’s always passive. Who takes six hours to get it together to go shopping. And then the checkout girl simply says good day, with her chewing gum and the cigarette smell from her fingers. And as soon as you walk out of the store, you start to analyze. What did she mean? Is she being ironic, good day, because of course I couldn’t have a good day. Your life becomes full of strangers. You stumble into others’ thoughts. Everyone is thinking and saying something nasty about you. You order in and try to avoid eye contact with the pizza delivery guy. If you manage it, the pizza guy must find it really weird that you don’t want to look at his face. Then one fine day, you try poker online. Or something. Because you're no longer a participant, the universe has set you apart, the world’s bastard, as they say. (Embraces Lisa, pinches her breast and takes her phone) Well, wicked old stepmother, just go do it, you're so convincing, explain to Stína that she’s just talking shit and if something happened then you’re to blame and you two can agree to put an end to this fucking nonsense.

Lisa: What happened to you, Mikael?

Mikael: (into Lisa’s phone) Kristín. Don’t hang up. Wait. There’s a woman here. Lisa. She wants to talk to you. She wants you to come and meet her.

Lisa: Mikael, I'm not talking to this girl.

Mikael: (into Lisa’s phone) Vallhólm 23. Just do this, talk to her. And then I promise I’ll make myself vanish, once and for all.

Lisa goes into the bedroom and slams the door.

Brúna enters the apartment.

Mikael: Well, hi.

Brúna: (looking at him long and hard) Do you try to be a jerk?

14. The potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Mikael  No, what do you mean?
Brúna  I sent you a friend request on Facebook and you rejected me. What’s wrong with you?
Mikael  I’m only on Facebook when I’m totally out of it and trying to give people viruses and stuff.
Brúna  (embracing Mikael) Huh. All I do is share photos of tulips with some saying or other attached so that people think I’m blooming, haha. (a beat) Where did Mom go?
Mikael  Why are you dressed like a retard?
Brúna  I drive a bus.
Mikael  You drive a bus? I thought you were going to be prime minister! Where’ve you just come from?
Brúna  I went to see a doctor.
Mikael  Everything okay?
Brúna  Hey, what are you doing here?
Mikael  When you’ve got a full bus, you know, little kindergartners and maybe some preschoolers and muscular tourists and the windows are steamy and it's slippery, winter’s just getting started, and you're hungry and your back’s sweaty... don’t you ever just think: I’m going to drive into the car ahead?
Brúna  No. Never.
Mikael  Oh.
Brúna  But there is one old vehicle still in use. Or old, not so old, maybe just a bit worn out.
Mikael  Right.
Brúna  And, well, the seats are so low, they barely reach your shoulders. So if you went and got into a smash, everyone from one to seventy would break their necks. (Screams) Hössi!
Mikael  But if you had to emergency brake?
Brúna  Emergency brake – crik, crik, crik - forty broken necks. Nobody would blame me. (Screams) Hössi! We need to get out of here.
Mikael  Is that your child?
Brúna  That’s my son. Did he fool you ...?

15.

the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Mikael What do you mean?

Brúna Nothing, he pretends he’s trans, he definitely fooled mom. He made a special agreement with all the teachers at the school, he didn’t have to do homework or anything for a whole year. We knew nothing about it. Hössi, do you want to be a girl?

Höskuldur Fuck off.

Mikael Good for him. And his dad is?

Brúna Two moms.

Mikael Yeah, okay, cool... I mean when I'm seventy with too much skin on my eyelids, taking a stroll in Patpong in Bangkok, and I see a very beautiful body, you follow me, a little flesh on it, a fine orange skin, but fresh skin, like honey in color, cheap homemade silicon, and it turns out that this is a ladyboy, with a little rice dick, am I going to be some kind of moral compass? No, I'm heterosexual! I mean, it’s naturally all confusing... especially over there ...

Brúna Yes, and everyone these days is either a bit pansexual or a bit non-binary.

Mikael Yes.

Silence.

Brúna Your dad, he's always in full swing out there in Thailand ...

Mikael His wife tried to set him on fire. He actually says your mom tried that too.

Brúna Definitely right. Who wouldn’t want to be a fly on the wall out there.

Mikael I think they fuck flies, too.

Brúna Hössi, we're going!

Mikael Hold on, you’ve got pearls in your ears, aren’t they heavy?

Brúna No. (She opens the sliding door and makes as if to go)

Mikael Are you in a hurry?

Brúna Yes.

Mikael You cut your hair.

Brúna It was heavy.

Mikael Was it? (A fly can be heard down low) Listen, there's a fly on your ass.

16. the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Týrfingsson, 2016
Brúna  You going to kill it?
Mikael  "Never kill flies in someone else’s house.” Remember?
Brúna  Yes, she said that, that old lady in the book, The Fish Can Sing. Still confuses me.
Mikael  Why?
Brúna  This is your house as much as mine, we lived here together for five years.

Mikael kills the fly by slapping Brúna’s butt; she’s both confused and enticed.

Brúna  Ha, always so hard, you always did everything so hard. Funny you're here. I've just been thinking about how it all was back then and...
Mikael  Hey, I was just a teenager, I was busy with other people, I couldn’t be a brother, no one taught me anything like that, my mom was dead and your mom was trying to set my dad on fire and I just ...
Brúna  Wow, you're so all over the place. Sometimes I imagine you're at the back of a bus and ready to take the wheel if something happens. Or there to throw out the winos.
Mikael  Of course. I threw dad out of my own Confirmation.
Brúna  You told me.
Mikael  He’s big, but not especially strong.
Brúna  No, you know, he's small boned and he just floods over everything like water, you know?

Mikael  What are you doing?
Brúna  Don’t you remember? We used to do that! Instead of saying sorry.
Mikael  Yes, I remember.
Brúna  You were kind to mom. That's not easy.
Mikael  I remember your mom so well, but it’s like there’s something missing...
Brúna  Wow, people never remember me, waiters at restaurants always forget what I ordered or bring me just any food. My mother is always acting up in front of others, but then she just takes her leave in front of me, stops looking after herself, clings for the most part to a belief that she doesn’t exactly realize her effect on people. She never lives in reality, 17.

© Tyrfingur Tyrflingsson, 2016
she’s trapped in an imagining of what reality could be. Oh god, I talk and talk and talk, I have to stop talking.

Mikael (looks at his watch) Höskuldur!

Brúna Hössi! You’re being called! Why are you calling him?

Mikael It's here... the battery. I was wondering if it would be ok if we went to buy a battery for his car.

Brúna Do you want to?

Mikael Yes.

Brúna We can take the four to the mall.

Mikael Sure. Or. There’s a shop across the street, we can walk ...

Brúna Together?

Mikael Yes.

Lísa comes out of her room and Höskuldur up from the basement. Lísa is wearing sunglasses and fails to see them.

Lísa Why are you here?

Mikael I got Brúna to stay a little longer.

Brúna Thanks for looking after him.

Lísa (distracted) Yes, it was nothing. (Scrutinizes them) You haven’t changed. Except your hair, Brúna, what have you done to your hair?

Brúna What about my hair?

Lísa Nothing. It’s fine.

Brúna Are you saying I’m beautiful?

Lísa Yes.

Brúna Did you hit your head?

Mikael We’re just going to the shop.

Höskuldur No, you’re going to see the man with the snout.

Brúna Hössi! Then we’ll go home.

18. the potato eaters

Mikael    No, we'll come back here so we can chat more, hear about your life, Lisa, find out how you're doing.

*Mikael, Brúna and Höskuldur leave.

*The doorbell rings. Lisa opens it for Kristín, who is holding coffee in a carryout container and a bag full of needle and yarn. Her perfume wafts over to the audience. She stands in the street in her wool socks like she doesn't dare enter.

Lisa    Come in.

Kristín    Yes, thanks.

*Kristín puts the bag, the coffee, her phone and her sunglasses on the floor and starts to remove her jacket.

Lisa    I invited you to come in, not move in.

Kristín    No, sorry. (She picks everything up again).

Lisa    What are you doing here?

Kristín    Mikki promised to stop calling if I listened to you.

Lisa    But I have nothing to say.

Kristín    Oh.

Lisa    Just stand there a moment, and we can say we tried.

Kristín    (stands dead still and looks around) No flowers?

Lisa    I water them too much. Drown them.

Kristín    Do we need to stand here much longer, do you think?

Lisa    Only a bit longer, just so we can tell Mikael and ourselves that we tried to resolve this.

Kristín    You know it's the police who solve crimes.

Lisa    Relax.

Kristín    Okay.

*Lisa turns on the radio and Nina Simone's “Marriage is for Old Folks” resounds in the living room. She wiggles her hips in time, sings along a line, turns Kristín around in a circle as she holds onto all her stuff. Finally, Kristín cannot help but smile.

Kristín    Funny song. You were married, of course, right, you and Mikki’s dad before you went to...

Lisa To Serbia. Yes. (Kristín blinks).
Kristín You’re a nurse?
Lisa You know a lot about me.
Kristín You’re famous, aren’t you?
Lisa Are you a nurse?
Kristín No, but I actually took ...
Lisa Took what?
Kristín A short online course in co-dependecy.
Lisa You should have taken a longer one...
Kristín Wow, it suddenly occurs to me, since we’re just, you know, killing time, couldn’t we, I mean I’d really like... a glass of white wine, something dry?
Lisa I don’t drink.
Kristín Yes, then maybe coffee or you know red wine, something dry?

Lisa clambers up on an old sofa and fishes out a vodka bottle, pouring it into a glass and handing it to Kristín who pours the liquor into the coffee.

Kristín I have to ask straight out: Are you going to tell me off?
Lisa You don’t tell grown-ups off.
Kristín You don’t have a liquor cabinet? Nursing isn’t well paid, of course.
Lisa Dad kept the bottles down in the couch.
Kristín (sitting on a chair) Is he dead?
Lisa Died where you’re sitting.
Kristín God, aren’t you glad. Joke.
Lisa The same day my dad died mom sat in that chair and people watched her grief... she was completely in her element. And then that night she died, too.
Kristín From sorrow?
Lisa Obesity.
Kristín (standing) Your mom?
Lisa Yes. Do you always do this?
Kristín What?

Lisa  Ask questions so we don’t have to talk.
Kristín No. I can tell you that my dad would go crazy if he knew I was here.
Lisa  Why?
Kristín Dad wants to send Mikki to prison for four years. And then Mikki will spend his whole life paying me damages, so he’ll be in prison forever.
Lisa  In a lifelong prison?
Kristín Yes, because I’ll always be in a prison too. I feel like I am in a helium balloon hovering above me. Dad just says: this is why we have laws in this country.
Lisa I also had a great dad. Very strict. His face was all hard.
Kristín My dad too.
Lisa Until the weekend came. Then he was in love.
Kristín With you?
Lisa We don’t all want our dad to fall in love with us. With a young man. And dad didn’t care, just walked around, boasting like a five-year-old boy. Until Sunday evening. Then he beat his boyfriend, came home and wept in mom’s lap. And starved himself until the middle of the next week.
Kristín From love?
Lisa Hahaha. No. Dad came back from work and had to cook us a feast but all he ate was Kristín How do you remember so much? I can’t remember anything. Not before I'm ten years old, there's this toy monkey in a cage at this mall called Eden... And I remember thinking, he's just a rag doll, he shouldn’t have to be in a cage, unless the cage is protecting him.
Lisa Is this how we’re going to handle this?
Kristín And I remember how there would always be a little comment, every day, you're not too good to look after kids, no, I know, I know I'm not too good, that's not my problem...
"Kristín, wear wool socks, so they can’t hear you so much when you walk."

Lisa
My first memory is of mom, lying there totally alone because of her obesity, on the bed, her cheeks furry, howling in her greed. Then she stopped washing. I woke up at night and stole in to wash her underwear. I stopped letting friends visit after they saw the blood leaking down her legs and down into her shoes which filled up and spilled onto the floor. And dad down in the basement eating potatoes. Everything went in circles. And I don’t know what Dad enjoyed more, the crime or the punishment. Which do you think is better?

Kristín  Punishment.

Lisa  Mikael grew up here to a large extent, with those people, and they were still better than his dad. Could it be that Mikael has already served his punishment?

Kristín  You are disgustingly funny. Like some mafioso trying to get me to quit. I know your type all too well. You're just afraid of what people would think of you, a fine woman, respected, who was there in that stupid war feeding Starvin Marvin or something. Then your stepson is just a rapist ...

Lisa  Well, I tried.

Lisa turns up “Marriage is for Old Folks.” Kristín finishes the coffee and goes to leave. Lísa’s phone can be heard making a sound and she turns down the music. Kristín looks at her.

Lisa  Are you on Tinder?

Kristín  Are you on Tinder?

Lisa  This one’s sent me a picture, yes, this proud penis. Wants to piss on me. Perhaps the best offer of the day.

Kristín  Yes, better than, "Can I look into your eyes while we make love?"

Lisa  Are you on Tinder?

Kristín  No.

Lisa  But you’re not in a relationship anymore?

Kristín  I’m not going to just jump into the next one.

Lisa  (looks at the phone) This is a pretty nice penis. One should humiliate onself on a regular basis. Otherwise, we start to think everything is humiliating, and life gets boring. Right?

Kristín  I don’t know.

Lisa  Did you believe in him?

22.  the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Kristín  Yes.
Lisa   How did you do that?
Kristín What do you mean?
Lisa   Mikki is a loser. He never wanted to get full marks on a test. He wanted to get full marks on a test without studying. He did not want to learn an instrument, he wanted to play an instrument. He was in a band, he does not know Old Noah.
Kristín Wasn’t that the idea of this band of his.
Lisa   That so?
Kristín Maybe not.
Lisa   These boys sit and wait for everyone to think they are sensational. You know, Kristín, that he isn’t sensational. He is not misunderstood. You’ve kept his nonsense afloat. If you keep on, he’ll never mature; that way, you can control him totally. It’s called manhating.
Kristín Has it occurred to you that it will help him to take responsibility for what he did?
Lisa   Should he be grateful that the one person he currently knows and trusts is sending him to jail? You know he was saving up for a trip for you two to Thailand.
Kristín You’re lying.
Lisa   You're just sulky because you feel something for someone you loathe.
Kristín He uses violence, Lisa, I'm afraid of him, I woke up ...
Lisa   The truth is that violence is just like wine, wonderful with good food but sad for those who are addicted to it. Violence is just the animal part of us and entirely absurd to think we should get rid of it... that doesn’t work. Do you know what I find so awful about it all?
Kristín Do I want to know?
Lisa   I think you’re longing for it. After having been in Kosovo, where I stitched genitals back together from what was left of their parts after the kinds of real attack you only see in war, then we girls realize how hollow it is to be upset over some mild misunderstanding.

23.  the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Kristín  And because someone happened to be gang-raped in Kosovo many years ago, I’m meant to be grateful for having known my rapist?

Lisa  When did your dad last visit you?

Kristín  Yesterday.

Lisa  Exactly. And before that? It's been a long time. Maybe several years. Hasn’t it? Now you’re getting attention, love and this wonderful role, the role of the victim. A free pass from dad. And wounded. Wounds you salt every time the world sends you a sign that perhaps you ought to bear some responsibility for yourself.

Kristín  Stop it.

Lisa  And pain brings a high.

Kristín  Listen you, well, you just, I ...

Kristín can’t come up with anything. Lisa hands her back to the bottle, and then a dove flies into the glass door with a dink.

Lisa  Mum only knew one story: Doves with babies are in trouble if they can’t find food anywhere, they look for two days, but if they do not find anything they stand on tip-toe in the middle of the nest and begin to peck at their chest, picking at it until they bleed and the kids can drink the blood. The dove dies, but the carcass suffices to bring the young up.

The dove stirs, Lisa opens the door out to the deck and stamps down on the pigeon’s head.

Kristín  What's the matter with you?

Lisa  (throws the carcass into the garden) It’s fine, give it to the cat, she can eat it. Shouldn’t females stand together? (strokes Kristín’s hair) Sometimes what you want isn’t what you need. Mikael is really so gentle. And you do have some faith in him, dear.

Kristín  He’s only gentle when it suits him.

Kristín sits, Lisa moves behind her.

Lisa  Do you believe that?

Kristín  Yes.

Lisa  Kristín, it’s not so awful. This will all be okay, it will pass. (Strokes Kristín’s shoulders).

Kristín  Stop.

24.  the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Lisa  You just have to forget about it, just rest and then you and Mikael can keep on going.
Kristín  Stop.
Lisa  You’ll have Mikki in your pocket.
Kristín  Stop, please.
Lisa  (eases down the straps on Kristín’s shirt and strokes her chest) And he doesn’t make all these demands. He thinks you’re great.
Kristín  I’m, well, here I... (no words come to her, she takes a gulp of vodka). You smell wonderful.
Lisa  (bends down to the girl's cheek and kisses her, as if wishing her a good night's sleep) Stína, you've shown Mikael that he can't use you for anything.

Lísa  You just go to your dad.
Kristín  Yes.
Lísa  And says you're done accusing Mikael. Your dad will respect you for that.

Lísa gathers Kristín’s stuff and puts it in her lap. Kristín leaves. Lísa puts water in a bucket and cleans the blood on the deck and glass door.

Lísa  (to herself) Like the Sisters said at Nursing School: The floor will never be cleaner than the water in the bucket.

Mikael comes in holding a branch of redcurrants.

Lísa  Did you break a branch off my bush?
Mikael  Sorry. (hands her the branch).
Lísa  Kristín and I chatted.
Mikael  How did it go?
Lísa  Where did Brúna and Höskuldur go?

25. the potato eaters

Mikael  To the shop, to buy a battery for the car.
Lisa  Which car? Is he interested in cars?
Mikael  You know he's always lying with his "I'm a girl" bullshit.
Lisa  Do you think he's the first thirteen–year-old boy to bully me?
Mikael  I was fifteen. (Walks over to the toilet and pretends to pee) You stood there saying,
"Maybe he’s not very big but he is beautiful like everything else about you."
Lisa  Mikael, you describe me like someone in a porno, I never said that.
Mikael  Do you know that I always know where you are in the world? Not what you are doing but where you are.
Lisa  Mikael the stalker.
Mikael  Why is this so simple for you?
Lisa  Because I'm not trying.
Mikael  What?
Lisa  To be a princess in some fairy tale.
Mikael  Aren’t you? I think I’d like to have you wear something natural, like flax. Indeed, I know of one cute fat girl who marries such odd people, dwarves and trans and so on. She has no prejudices. She could marry us at some waterfall and we could rent a summerhouse and have a weekend there and have a barbecue even though it’s winter. There’s nobody else waiting for us.
Lisa  We’re not getting married.
Mikael  I know. But I fooled you.
Lisa  Just joking?
Mikael  Yes, you don’t get anything. I’ll stroll into the mall. Feel it in my sacrum and in front of my pelvis that you are in the mall too, but still I stroll in. I start arguing with you in my head. I lose. Beginning to try to kiss you and argue again and losing again and now I’ve gotten speechless. Then I bump into you. Look at you and am completely exhausted and lovesick and you grab my penis in front of everyone but nobody sees it and you walk... away and waggle like you are much younger than me. And I've become heavy and old, deranged from horniness, and I'll chase you up to the third floor and ...

Mikael goes over to her, Lisa grabs hold of his zipper, slides it down and loosens the belt. Then she puts the shirt down in the pants, pulls them up and rezip.

Lisa Look at you, locked in your pants.

Mikael Lisa ...

Lisa Do you think they are happy?

Mikael Who?

Lisa Brúna and Höskuldur.

Mikael I'm not exactly an expert on happiness.

Lisa Ach. Do I have a bad effect on them?

Mikael You have a good effect on me.

Lisa Did Brúna talk about how she was going to stop coming here?

Mikael Why don’t you let these redcurrants grow? It's like some soldier cut them.

Lisa So I do not lose control of them. Damn, you smell funky. Hahaha. You use too much washing powder. And cheap stuff. You smell like a teenage girl, I mean it. Is this something vanilla?

Mikael I use perfume.

Lisa This is bodyspray. I mean it. Your dad used to wear too much aftershave but he still knew he should use aftershave.

Mikael He invited me to Thailand the other day and when I'd been on a bender with him for a few days, I beat him. I was telling him how I met you in the mall, and he started laughing so I beat him ... you should have heard him crying.

Lisa You beat him. Thirty years too late.

Mikael Hey, I was just a kid, was I supposed to beat my dad for you?

Lisa You should just be grateful your dad is alive.

Mikael What would have changed if I had beat him thirty years earlier, you ever wonder?

Lisa I wouldn´t have gone to Kosovo.

Mikael But wouldn’t the war have been lost without you?

27.

the potato eaters
Lisa  (grabs him around the head) I made cheese on toast for you every day. You never came to fear me. We were both young, like kids. Why do you want to destroy me with this bullshit?

Mikael  Stína started studying nursing once but did not complete the classes and gave up entirely. But before she stopped...

Lisa  Failed.

Mikael  Yes, then, failed. Before she failed, her class spent a whole day discussing war nurses and Florence Nightingale and all those caring old ladies who nobody cares about. And you.

Lisa  What did people say?

Mikael  You’d gone to war.

Lisa  I did not know, one never tells me anything.

Mikael  I like telling you things.

Lisa  How can you be both so sad and happy in your eyes?

Mikael  Because with one eye ...

Lisa  yes

Mikael  I see you in a flaxen dress at our waterfall.

Lisa  But of course.

Mikael  But in the other, I see you dead in a coffin.

Lisa  And there is nothing in between those two things?

Mikael  I only have two eyes.

Mikael takes off his pants and moves close to Lisa.

Lisa  You didn’t beat him badly?

Mikael  (steps out of underwear) He had to go to hospital.

Lisa strikes him gently with the branch on his penis. Mikael moans. Lisa lifts the branch again and strikes him on his buttocks. Mikael removes his shirt.

Lisa  You should not hit! (She strikes him in the stomach then tosses away the branch.)

Mikael Look at you. All horny and messed up. No, I don’t think you have a good effect on Brúna and Höskuldur, maybe I should tell them.

Lisa (serious) I convinced Kristín to stop accusing you.

Mikael I was joking.

Lisa Did what I could.

Mikael Sorry.

Lisa We're quits. When Brúna returns, you say goodbye to her and your and my relationship’s over.

Mikael And you will be alone?

Lisa I do not care.

Mikael And I will be alone?

Lisa Yes.

Mikael If you think I’m going to hit the bottom all on my own you’re insane (rips the branch away from her and throws it to the floor). Wherever I go, you go with me.

Lisa Stop this madness, boy.

Mikael I'm not a boy!

Lisa I spoke to Kristín. Get out.

Mikael thrusts his face up to Lisa, kisses her but she falls back. He grabs at her, holds her tight and kisses her again, when the little electric car comes onto the deck and into the apartment. Höskuldur appears.

Höskuldur Farty little fartpig, fart for me fartypig, hear the fartpig, fart for me, mmm, fartypig.

Now go away!

Mikael (stands up) Listen up little freak, I belong here too.

Lisa No, Mikael.

Mikael What are you going to do?

Lisa I'm going to learn to forget you.

Mikael (about Höskuldur) Who the hell is this kid? He talks and behaves like he’s five years old? Is he a retard?

Mikael intends to grab Höskuldur; just then Brúna comes in with a bag from the shop at Engihjalla.
Brúna  You and Mikael are neighbors, mom, did you know?

_Höskuldur tries to pinch Mikael, but he steals away._

Lisa  (to Mikael) Be nice to the boy!

Brúna  Mom, what's up to you? He worships his cousin, we worship him.

Mikael  You hear that, Lisa?

Brúna  Is there anything to eat?

Lisa  What does he want to eat?

Brúna  Let him choose.

Lisa  Okay.

Brúna  You're terribly sweet when stressed.

Lisa  Thanks, Höskuldur.

Brúna  Hössí, sweetie, go find something to eat.

Höskuldur  Yeah, yeah.

_Lisa and Höskuldur go down to the basement._

Brúna  Why are you trembling?

Mikael  I need to get moving. Being at a hostel, starting to shower and finding that the smell of my feet is so weird I must buy fungal cream. I just want someone else to make that trip with me, I don’t want put the fungal cream on her unless she asks for it, people are all sorts. But having somebody with me, who also has fungus, the smells mingling into one stench.

Brúna  What did Mom say exactly?

Mikael  I’m going.

Brúna  No, don’t go.

Mikael  What?

Brúna  Did you know my wife is a doctor, pediatrician?

Mikael  No.

Brúna  Do you know any doctors?

30.  _the potato eaters_
Mikael  No.
Brúna  So, you don’t know the way doctors talk?
Mikael  Are you fucking with me?
Brúna  No, of course...
Mikael  Brúna, I’m not someone people should talk to.
Brúna  I came home yesterday and began to describe my day to her, which was totally absurd. I went to get a haircut, but my hairdresser had gone missing in Spain. And then I went to work and two people vomited on the four on the same trip!
Mikael  Were you driving especially ridiculous?
Brúna  No, no. But it’s always, man, just wow, missing in Spain and two pukers, that’s something.
Mikael  It’s something.
Brúna  I was quite sure she would feel that... something... but she didn’t answer, just said, "I lost a kid today on the operating table. He was twelve years old."
Mikael  It’s like you have your mom twice over.
Brúna  Last year I was looking for a Christmas gift for Magga and I just thought: Okay, I’ll shave my pussy.
Mikael  She must have been really into that.
Brúna  You have no idea what my pussy looks like these days. Giving birth to a child is like throwing a hand-grenade into your pussy ... or something. Anyway. I didn’t dare look at my pussy so closely. So I gave up on that and decided to save up instead for an iPad. I saved so much I even managed to buy a computer for her as a Christmas gift. Know what she gave me?
Mikael  Err, also a computer, you think alike?
Brúna  A Range Rover. But I get free travel on the bus, and she knows that. It’s just like mom all over. Before she went to Kosovo, she asked: Can Momma go to Yugoslavia to save children? And I answered Uh, no, you’re supposed to be here because you’re our mom. She didn’t laugh and didn’t cry, it just frustrated her because I’d given the wrong answer, and so she left. And sent me pictures of the children she saved. They were somehow all like me.

Mikael Can I ask you one thing?

Brúna Yes! I don’t think I’ve ever been asked permission to be asked something.

Mikael What did the dermatologist say at the mall?

Brúna (after a short silence) That I have dry scalp.

Mikael And what does that mean?

Brúna I have to use Head & Shoulders every day.

She hugs him.

Mikael What are you doing?

Brúna (laughs) I don’t know, you make me act weird. In a good way. Is that why you were called prince? Coming and rescuing people from reality, rescuing them from Kópavogur?

Mikael No, when I went to school I had a beard like Prince. The musician. Your mom thought that was great. Are they just pottering away down there?

Brúna I hope so.

Mikael She is so fried.

Brúna What did she say?

Mikael "I'll forget all about you."

Brúna Oh, that’s mom in a nutshell. And yet she’s mellowed and I think she’s become rather silly, a little like me ... and that makes me hate her even more. Once she called, she’d gotten with some soldier in Kosovo, and they decided to go on vacation to Paris. And she rang just to describe the perfume store. That’s why I don’t use perfume.

Mikael Do you know why she left?

Brúna To Paris?

Mikael To Kosovo.

Brúna No, but it would definitely be possible to trick me to go to Kosovo. I was tricked into artificial insemination at 19 years old.

Mikael  He’s a cool guy, the little freak.

Brúna  I was so disgustingly thin, I stopped getting my period so I wouldn’t ever get pregnant.
But then I got fat and then ... I’m really into Hössi, but he’s why I lack for so many things.

Mikael  Your wife...

Brúna  Yes?

Mikael  Is she why you’re lacking, too?

Brúna  Yes.

Mikael  Didn’t she just give you a Range Rover?

Brúna  Sure.

Mikael  I'm grateful if someone just gives me herpes. You don’t love her?

Brúna  I love that her jaws don’t make a sound when she chews, or stuff, that there's no such mess in her mouth while she eats, so she's not really annoying in that sense. And, Mikael, in real life love means not always being annoyed at your partner.

Mikael  No, love means fucking someone without having to think about porn during it.

Brúna  Ha, then I'm not in love. Fuck it, you know, sometimes there are memories I have of us that are... like my porn ... is that weird?

Mikael  I don’t know.

Brúna  It's not like we're related.

Mikael  No, but I was a bit older.

Brúna  We were both children. I think my mother knew this and envied me, hahaha.

Mikael  Sure. Remember, you took pictures of me?

Brúna  I still have them.

Mikael  Didn’t you study photography?

Brúna  Yes, I did.

Mikael  Why didn’t you make that your job?

Brúna  After I began to have to take family pictures, Hössi and Magga and me, the photographer in me just died. I wouldn’t know how to hold a camera, I just use my phone. You know, one time we got 1,000 likes. Made me miserable. Sometimes when I think I'm going crazy, I start thinking it would be good idea to go see mom, but of course I don’t because she would make me insane. It's like I'm stuck in safety overalls made of glass and I scream and scream but no one hears me and because of all the screaming the glass is steamy so nobody sees me either. You know, I’m talking so much I'm getting hoarse.

Mikael  You’re almost more alone than me.

Brúna  I told the dermatologist about mom. He told me to stay well away from this woman. Do you think he’s right?

Mikael  I don’t know. But… I mean, he's a dermatologist, right.

Brúna  I've been thinking ... (plucking up courage) Today you were talking about Thailand and stuff, the fungus cream.

Mikael  Yes.

Brúna  And...

Mikael  What?

Brúna  I want us to go.

Mikael  Hahaha, what is this crap?

Brúna  I'm a Taurus, Mikael, I always make sense. This is really important.

Mikael  Now?

Brúna  Yes. Yes, or else I’ll be tricked into not doing it. I want to go to Thailand, not for the ladyboys or anything like that... Thailand is definitely far enough away.

Mikael  And not come back?

Brúna  You know, brought back by the police, lose Hössi in some bitter divorce, being sent to prison. If I just get to decide this one time, to decide something big, you know, for me.
And for Hössi. And for you. I’m not a loser. Yes.

Mikael  Brúna, not everyone leaves you and steals from you. Sometimes things just happen and it’s not about you.

Brúna  Mikael. If your phone were lost for a week, how many people would have called you?

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
Mikael None, but ...
Brúna What else are you doing anyways?

A rustling is heard from the basement.

Mikael I have a little money... then we can take out local currency in Thailand's, using debit cards... you use the credit card to buy our tickets.
Brúna You must teach me everything! I don’t know anything.
Mikael I'll take a credit card from your mom.
Brúna You know, I’ll buy first class tickets, I mean, I don’t care.
Mikael And some of those little liquor bottles?
Brúna Yes, and a device for watching tv shows.
Mikael And blankets so we’ll get too hot, all moist on our scalps.
Brúna Yes. Not dry ... I'm not afraid.

Lisa and Höskuldur come up from the cellar. She holds a saucepan with boiled potatoes and laughs aloud.

Lisa Höskuldur, you're as crazy as your grandmother. Tell them what you said. Go on, say it! Speak! I asked him to choose some food from the pantry. He walked into the pantry and out again saying, "We’ll have nothing but potatoes to eat." And I asked: Why in the world, Hoskuldur, would we just want potatoes for dinner? Why in the whole world, my dearest boy, and he answered ...

Höskuldur (interrupting) Then it is like we are really lacking something.
Lisa If you have a potato, you have a feast, that's what the Serbs say.
Mikael Are you still in Kosovo?
Lisa And of course I'm just like every other potato, no shell around me, no skin, well, a little skin, no complications in the middle like blood oranges, cut in half with all their patterns and millions of colors. I'm simple and ...
Mikael (interrupting) Empty as a potato.
Silence.
Lisa Do you know what I did in Kosovo?

35. the potato eaters

© Tyrfingur Tyrfingsson, 2016
What did you not do?

I was a pediatric nurse in Kosovo. Mamitsa. All the kids called me that. It means mom.

Serbian is so beautiful because it's rough.

Then you abandoned them too. Why did you come home?

I was sent home.

So you were forced to come back to me again?

By a soldier with a gun.

Lisa puts the potato pan on the table and Höskuldur arranges four small white ceramic cups on the table. Lisa fetches a coffee pot and puts it on the table. Höskuldur puts a black blanket over Mikael and Brúna's shoulders, and a third over himself. Lisa sits, Höskuldur puts a black blanket over her shoulders. Lisa looks ahead, stoops her shoulders, and pours coffee into the cups. They eat the potatoes. A dim light the table. Höskuldur takes up a potato.

This one's weird.

Oh, what's up with it?

Perhaps that's the mom.

(bites into the potato but spits it out) Oh ... that's disgusting.

You don't care for it?

No war food. (Silence) Can I tell you what I dreamt?

Well now, you've suddenly started asking me permission?

(shouting at Lisa) Listen to her!

I'm buckled in and cannot get out. I'm trembling with fear and I'm trying to run away but then I look down and see my legs are wooden.

Are your feet pieces of wood?

What do you think this means?

Like parquet? Is it a trap?

Would you try to answer me?

You forgive yourself for everything but not others. As soon as you get into a relationship with another person, you stop being yourself and begin to look for a prince to save you from the relationship. Then you start being with the prince and cease to exist.

So, I'm only alive ...

Lisa  In a state of war; you erupt when between relationships, then lie dormant in a new relationship. This is bound up with mankind’s most dirty secret. Do you know what mankind’s most dirty secret is?

Mikael  Something tells me you know.

Lisa  There’s nowhere as interesting as a warzone because there’s nowhere as terrible as a warzone.

Brúna  And you still miss it?

Lisa  I miss the wounds. Wounds gaping wide, welling pus, the putrefying stench from the flesh and the insects eating the muscle apart. To deal with such a wound, a real wound, heal it, save what cannot be saved. That’s something. Here I draw splinters from fingers and wipe bedridden old biddies!

Brúna  Then go back!

Lisa  Kosovo’s peaceful now.

Brúna  Couldn’t you blow everything to pieces?

Lisa  The Serbs says that when a bomb explodes, you have to start dancing, there’s nothing else to do!

Lisa stands up and begins to dance a Serbian national dance. She draws Höskuldur into the dance.

Höskuldur  This is not a dance, it’s just a stroll.

Lisa  Now, want it like that? (Singing) My kitty dances tango tango tango. Is grandmother odd?

Höskuldur  Yes.

Lisa  Your hair’s so beautiful. Let’s play a game!

Brúna  I'm trying to talk to you.

Mikael  Brúna, she doesn’t hear anything anyone says.

Lisa  The first one to talk has to keep quiet for what’s left of the evening! One…

Brúna  Mikael and I made a decision.

Lisa  Two…

Brúna  Mom! You're so fucking embarrassing.
Lisa Allbequietonthree!

They fall silent.

Brúna We ...

Lisa (interrupting) You lose! Hahaha.

Brúna We're going to...

Lisa By a landslide!

Mikael Listen to her!

Brúna We're going to Thailand.

Silence.

Lisa (laughing) To punish me?

Brúna You won't believe it, but I'm going for me.

Lisa You too?

Mikael We three.

Lisa You mean “we four.”

Brúna No, mom, just three.

Lisa, What about your wife?

Silence.

Brúna We're going to separate.

Lisa Does she know?

Brúna Not yet.

Lisa Not yet.

Brúna Don’t you understand me?

Lisa No.

Brúna Thanks.

Lisa For what?

Brúna For not stopping me.

Lisa I'll just let the police deal with it. You don’t have a bean, Mikki, and you're probably using your wife’s card. And after she rings when half-a-million króna are taken late in the evening and you do not answer, she will call the police. You’ll probably be at the candy isle at Duty Free at Leifssþð International when you’re arrested for trying to steal a child or, should I say, two children.

Brúna But I would be arrested for something I’d decided by myself, for myself. I would grin from ear to ear in the police car because it would absolutely be my fault, I alone would be responsible because I alone had made the choice. Yes!

Mikael Nobody’s getting arrested.

Lisa’s phone rings.

Brúna Don’t answer that! You’re talking to me. Mom, you’re talking to me!

Lisa (answers the phone) Lisa.

Mikael (on his phone) I need a taxi at Vallhólm 23.

Brúna Is everyone going to be on the phone?

Lisa Why not?

Brúna Because I’m saying goodbye to you, mom.

Lisa First, I have to introduce you to this woman. (On the phone) Forgive the hullabaloo, I’ll let you in.

Höskuldur opens the door for Kristín. Silence strikes the group.

Kristín Are you playing statues or ...?

Mikael (to Kristín) You fucking cow.

Kristín Hi. I should have just called, I thought you were alone, Lisa.

Mikael (to Kristín) No, sorry, it’s just this whole thing has been hard on me, but I’m right, and if I can, I’d like to call you sometime and chat just as often as you like. I can voice call you, it’s free of charge.

Brúna Hold on, hello there, Brimrún, and no, we’re not playing statutes.

Kristín I need to vomit.

Mikael I forgive you, my Stina.

Lisa Now I need to vomit.

Kristín Oh, I should have just called.

Mikael  We’ll reserve a table, I'll wear a suit ...

Kristín  Dad made the charge earlier.

Brúna  What charge?

Mikael  (to Lísa) This is your fault.

Kristín  There’s four of them, people who work with him, at home right now planning how to put you in prison for a long time.

Mikael  Kristín, you don’t want to do this to me.

Kristín  Dad drives me to work in the morning and we have lunch together and he’s going to take me to the cottage this weekend because he doesn’t think I can be alone. I'm a daddy’s girl. For the first time in my life. And even if I could completely forgive you, Mikael, for being one of the world's greatest assholes, and you're a crazy woman, and whomever you are ...

Brúna  Brimrán.

Kristín  Oh, god, maybe you're worst off. Yes, I would totally help you and would completely sacrifice myself or, you know ... Except that Dad and me went today and got ice cream.

Mikael  I'll give you an icecream machine!

Kristín  He's crazy. I thought he might have had a stroke but he's going to throw you in prison, Mikael. And he starts crying when he talks about you, and then I start crying, not because of you, because you're such a loser, but because he's crying.

Brúna  What is this woman talking about?

Mikael  Eating ice cream and crying.

Kristín  I can’t give this up, he needs to formally accuse you and I hope he'll do well because I am with Daddy in this.

Mikael  Damned bloody dried up cunt.

Kristín  Mikael. You were right to start. You should have killed me.

Mikael  So you’re going kill me? A judgment like this, a charge like this, people talk about it endlessly, I'll be in prison forever. I’ll never become a lawyer...

Kristín  Mikael. You don’t even have a high school diploma!

Lisa       Kristín.
Kristín    Yes.
Lisa       Good for you. Good luck.

Lisa leads Kristina to the front door.

Kristín    Thanks. (She goes)

Mikael     That fucking okay with you, Lisa?
Brúna      What's happening?
Lisa       Your travel companion has been charged with rape so you’ll probably both be arrested at Leifsstöð airport.
Brúna      (to Mikael) I know how we can do this.
Lisa       You definitely haven’t caught on to the difference in being with a man and being with a woman. You’re not allowed to mention that they drink. You sometimes wake up in a pisswet bed and have to believe them when they claim to have spilled water. And then they may still be drunk and ask you to suck them off. I doubt your pediatrician will do that.
Brúna      If I don’t get started on this, I’ll just get more remorseful. And you know, Mikael, if you did any of this, I don’t care. I like being with someone who is guilty and I would so much like to escape with you. You get me to talk and talk and talk, Mikael, it's like I can shovel into you everything that's within me and you’ll take it. I look at you, I just talk, and talk and...
Mikael     And maybe it's time to shut up for a moment. Lisa, you had supposed to fix this!
Brúna      Mom. (Short silence) We’ll leave Höskuldur behind.
Lisa       Have you gone totally insane?
Brúna      Mom. You’ll be with him most days when his mom is working. I’d be said to have gone to find myself, everyone understands that sort of thing.

Mikael walks to the bathroom, takes out his penis, pisses and sighs loudly. Brúna and Höskuldur look at him admiringly. Lisa sits.

Höskuldur  Grandmother.
Lisa  Yes
Höskuldur  Why is the bathroom in the kitchen? Why are all the doors shut up?
Brúna  Because your grandmother must have things closed off. She has never been able to let anyone in. Because your grandmother protects herself from those who love her. Because your grandmother starves you. Your grandmother makes you thirst for love and recognition. Like a dried-out potato doesn’t nourish anyone.
Lisa  My sweet Höskuldur.
Höskuldur  I just asked.
Lisa  Don’t you need a lift?
Brúna  Ha?
Lisa  Don’t you need a lift to the airport? What route will you take? Answer me!
Brúna  To the airport and then by plane.
Lisa  Don’t you have to take a bus first?
Brúna  Well, yes, the four.
Lisa  Everyone aboard. (Lisa tries to get them to sit like on a bus but they don’t) All aboard! Being with my Mikael. (Lisa pretends to drive a bus) No need for seatbelts.
Brúna  Drive carefully!
Lisa  Mom won’t get into an accident. And the bus, it’s full of gauzes and cheesecloths. (Lisa flings potatoes first at Mikael, then Brúna and finally Höskuldur) And mom is stuck in her seat, mom can’t get away and just drives.
Hoskuldur  Grandma, you can stop now.
Lisa  Bruuuuum. Bruuuuum. And my bus costs nothing because I’m mom and mom is a faucet full of water and mom is a pantry full of food and mom ...
Hoskuldur  Grandma. Are you there?
Lisa  (hesitates) Yes.
Mikael  (stands up) Brúna, the cab’s almost here.
Brúna  (stands up) Lisa, we’re going now...

Lisa It doesn’t work like this.

Mikael What?

Lisa You cannot end things this way. This must be a start. My Höskuldur, fetch the axe.

Höskuldur obeys his grandmother. Lisa gets slowly to her feet with the ax, but then rushes at the drywall that has been nailed across a door and rips it apart. Brúna’s child room and Mikael’s teenage room can be seen. Yellow light streams out. Brúna walks in through the doorway of her room and looks around.

Brúna My old room… You’re kidding. God, surely no one has been in here for 20 years.

Lisa I was in here this morning. I wash the bedding twice a month and I dust every other day and scrub the other. Same with your room, Mikael. And in Kosovo, I thought of you first every day and talked to you in my mind.

Mikael You’re lying.

Brúna goes into the room and comes back with a plait of human hair.

Lisa Then I started calling you into being in the little girls.

Brúna (grabs fistfuls of hair, some of it braided) What is this?

Lisa The girls in the camp usually didn’t have names so when no one saw I baptized them Brúna and they answered to their name and followed mamítsa. I changed you and nursed you. We celebrated your birthday. I baked pancakes, I don’t remember why I had a pancake pan. Ten girls and I together for your birthday party. See, here are some pictures.

Lisa opens the suitcase and takes out a photo album.

Brúna Who took the pictures?

Lisa Brúna number three or Brúna seven, they were so artistic, like you, had such a good eye.

Mikael comes out of his room in an old sweater by himself and with winner’s medal from pee-wee-soccer around his neck.

Mikael Did you also cut hair off the boys?

Lisa The boys were all close-cropped.

Brúna What did you do exactly?

Lisa At first I just took some hair, then I sometimes cut off locks. I gathered up all the hair when the Brúnas died, and they finally understood that, my bosses. I had started calling them Brúna in the medical records. And they sent me home. But I got to have your hair, Brúna, you see, it's like Höskuldur’s hair. Don’t you want to touch it, Brúna? Touch your hair, Brúna.

43. the potato eaters

Brúna No, no.

Lisa AmI just a bit crazy now? Well, now, hahaha. You are completely ...

Mikael Brúna, the taxi is waiting. Matter of fact, it's a real car with a real steering wheel and everything. Your mom is just confusing you. Well, she baptized some kids in your name, but she left us, left me with my dad which is an awful thing, but you were left with your grandmother and grandpa which was, you know, an atrocity.

Lisa (hands Höskuldur his phone) My Höskuldur... connect me.

Höskuldur shows her the phone.

Lisa So I’m on Facebook and everyone can see?

Höskuldur Yes.

Lisa (talking into the phone) Dear friends on Facebook and people in the media. And my beloved Brúna.

Mikael Don’t do this.

Lisa Today, Kristín Kristjánsdóttir formally accused my former stepson Mikael Ólafsson of rape. Mikael is a confused man and in a bad way and needs to take responsibility. But this, on the other hand, is not his fault. When Mikael was fifteen, I, his stepmother, fell in love with him. I have never before or after known such a lovely boy, gentle, sensitive and understanding. No one had ever listened to me like Mikki and nobody had ever loved me like he loved me. But he wasn’t as mature as I had hoped, maybe he was just like all teens younger than they seem. And shortly after we began having sex, he changed, hardened, and then his dad found out about us and I fled to the war in Kosovo. Mikael had become a different person. It is clear as day that Mikael has mitigating circumstances, the force I used on him. I will return my nursing license to the Medical Director and my Order of the Falcon goes to anyone who wants to take it. It’ll hang it outside here in the redcurrant bush. It's not like it goes well with anything. Sometimes a person is just a bit guilty.

HöskuldurCome.

MikaelI never meant any of this, Lisa. I would never have done anything, I'd never have said anything, you know that. You're totally insane, you just interpret things, you just ...

LisaI'm just free of you now.

MikaelAre you going to throw me out?

LisaYou have no right to be here.

MikaelHow can you say that?

LisaI'm not your mom.

MikaelShut up.

LisaI'm not your mom.

MikaelDon’t say that!

LisaI’m not your mom... but Mikael ...

MikaelWhat?

LisaI still want to know you. But you have to grow up.

MikaelBrúna.

BrúnaYes.

MikaelBrúna, come on, let this sick shitty cunt rot here in this filthy bedsit. Come on!

Brúna doesn’t move.

MikaelBrúna, come on.

HoskuldurWe're not coming.

Mikael rushes at Höskuldur, but Brúna steps into his path.

MikaelGet yourselves into the car, right now!

BrúnaOr what?

Mikael storms out and slams the door behind him.

9Lisa, Brúna and Höskuldur are standing on stage. Lisa’s phone beeps, vibrates, rings. Lisa takes her ax and cuts the phone in half.

45. the potato eaters
Brúna  You went to Kosovo.
Lísa  Yes
Brúna  Not because children in war are so much more grateful than Icelandic greedy-guts?
Lísa  No
Brúna  Or because I'm so normal and boring?
Lísa  No
Brúna  You just fell for some boy?
Lísa  And I was not big enough to handle it.
Brúna  You didn’t find it easy to leave me?
Lísa  No
Brúna  You fled.
Lísa  Yes.
Brúna  You didn’t want to leave.
Lísa  I wanted to stay.

_\textit{Brúna falls on her knees in front of Lisa and screams her life and soul’s pain into Lisa's abdomen. Brúna’s phone rings and she answers.}_

Brúna  \textit{(into the phone) Yes.}

_\textit{Brúna turns on the speaker and puts the phone down.}_

Mikael  \textit{(from the phone) Can she hear?}
Brúna  Yes.
Mikael  Can she hear how it’s all quiet here?
Lísa  Are you back home?
Mikael  Yes, nothing to be heard here.
Lísa  No, Mikael, it's quite alright, the apartment’s quiet.
Mikael  But then when I open the balcony door.

_\textit{Winds moan over the phone.}_

Lísa  Go back inside, Mikael!
Mikael  This, Höskuldur, this is what it is to be a prince, it's more blustery than one thinks.

Lisa Show Höskuldur how responsible you are and go back in.

Mikael I don’t want to be alone ... (the wind whines) The last few seconds with my love are good, the last few seconds he was with his love, that sounds great.

Lisa Mikael.

Brúna Mikki, no.

Mikael Stay with me while I die, I won’t be as afraid.

Lisa Everyone dies alone but ...

Mikael Not a prince like me, I ... (The noise of the wind falls silent) You have to come here, to me, Lisa.

Lisa Are you back inside?

Mikael Yes. Come. We can finally be together. You owe it to me, Lisa.

Lisa Mikael, I ...

_Höskuldur breaks the phone apart with the ax. A feather from the peace dove flutters to the ground._

_Silence. Lisa sits in the center of the stage._

Lisa You know, being alone, it’s fine. Alone.

Brúna You're not alone. We’re here now.

Lisa But I mean, tomorrow I'll be alone.

Brúna Not if Höskuldur and I come.

Lisa Why would you come?

Brúna Because you’ll invite us.

Lisa For a meal?

_Brúna dresses Höskuldur in his clothes._

Brúna For example. For example, lamb chops.

Lisa And potatoes.

Höskuldur And potatoes.

Lisa But Brúna, maybe we’ll just argue and slam doors and you’ll leave and...

Brúna Maybe? I guarantee we’ll fight and slam doors and I’ll storm out before we eat the damn potatoes.

Lisa And then?

47. the potato eaters

Brúna     A few days later, we’ll try it all over again.
Lisa      And what next?
Brúna     So we try again.
Lisa      And then?
Brúna     Again.
Lisa      And then again.

Brúna disappears through the door. Höskuldur hesitates.

Höskuldur        Lisa. Ma’am.
Lisa             (standing up) Yes.
Höskuldur        You’re beautiful when you’re standing.

Fade to black.
